Fifty years ago, the first class was accepted to the Stony Brook University School of Dental Medicine (SDM). Since then, the school has graduated more than 1,500 students who have dedicated themselves to delivering the highest quality of dental care throughout the country.

The golden anniversary was recognized the weekend of Sept. 9 with a series of celebratory events, culminating in an alumni dinner that featured conversations with School of Dental Medicine luminaries Philius Garant, DMD, Dean from 1979 to 1992; Vincent Iacono, DMD, faculty member, 1974 to present; and Ira Lamster, DDS, MMSc, charter class graduate and Dean Emeritus, Columbia University College of Dental Medicine.

Stony Brook University School of Dental Medicine Commemorates 50 Years of Providing Dental Education

By Kristen Pratt Machado — On Sep 18, 2023

Fifty years ago, Stony Brook University in New York admitted its first class of dental students. Since that first class of 22 students graduated, the public institution has educated more than 1,500 dentists. The school is the Long Island region's largest provider of dental care and its onsite student dental clinic sees more than 85,000 patient visits per year. Under the guidance of Dean Patrick M. Lloyd, DDS, MS, the School of Dental Medicine stands out for its unique fellowship program specializing in the treatment of patients with special needs, a rarity in the United States.
